- Bob and Ray met with [] on 10 January in an effort to expedite the completion of a Terrorism Study draft. [] reported that a draft should be available for our review by the end of this week.
- 25X1
- During the past two weeks, we have reviewed two drafts of the Cruise Missile follow-up report for the DCI. The latest draft still needs considerable work. We have so informed [] and provided him "several" suggestions and recommendations for improving the report to include substance and format.
- 25X1
- At our request, [] visited us on 10 January. He also met with Carol and discussed the activities of the CBW Intelligence Subcommittee, and assumed responsibility for providing staff support to the Subcommittee when he reports for duty later this week.
- Carol is on leave this week. She will let Air Force personnel know what her plans are on 22 January. There is no change in her planned departure date.

Combat Intelligence Analysis:

- A two-hour session of the Working Group was held on 11 January. Discussions largely focused on two working papers submitted respectively by the NSA and DIA representative.
 - The NSA paper highlighted the need to adopt at both national and theater levels a more coordinated basis for describing warfighting concepts and then using this focal point to derive the intelligence discipline architectures.
 - The DIA paper was an attempt to illustrate the ways in which national level interests are being incorporated with the intelligence architecture strategy for the support of theater forces.

- Both papers pointed up the necessity for a continuing "oversight" review process to ensure an efficient integration of all collection disciplines in providing support to theater commanders. In addition, the papers highlighted the difficulties that all collection disciplines are confronted with in supporting the varying warfighting analysts and doctrines.
- The Working Group concurred with George's suggestion that he draft a paper addressing the range of concerns which surfaced during the group's discussions and advancing some tentative recommendations for the Working Group's review and concurrence.

25X1 Narcotics Intelligence:
